Risk Control: The S&P Dividend Aristocrats Risk Controlled Index (SPXD10EE Index) manages risk by reducing its exposure to the underlying S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) in times of high volatility and increasing exposure in times of low volatility. The bond is structured so that the actual volatility of the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) is compared to the 10% target volatility every trading day (Average Index volatility during Quarter 1 2013 was 11.8%). If the actual volatility increases beyond 10%, exposure to the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) will be proportionately reduced to keep volatility at a maximum level of 10%, anytime volatility ever falls below 10%, exposure to the index will be proportionately increased up to a maximum of 150%. Please see the risk control section for further information. In order to protect performance from short term volatility returns are averaged over the final 6 months of the investment term.

How Dividend Income Impacts on the Index: It should be noted that while dividend income accrues for the benefit of investors in underlying stocks, when dividends are paid on the stocks in the index they are reinvested into the underlying index and so increase the index returns.

The S&P Dividend Aristocrats

The S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) was launched on 2nd May 2005 and is designed to measure the performance of large cap, blue chip companies within the S&P 500 that have followed a policy of consistently increasing dividends every year for at least 25 years. The current annual dividend yield on the index is in excess of 2.5%* per annum. Dividends are reinvested into the index and are accounted for in the index growth figures. Drawn from the members of the US S&P 500 stock market index, the Aristocrats Index is equal-weighted, with constituents being re-weighted every quarter. The minimum number of constituent stocks is 40, currently there are 54 stocks from a broad spectrum of industries in the index. S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) has both capital growth and dividend income characteristics and the index constituents had a combined market capitalization of $3,112 billion ($3.112 trillion) as of May 2013*. The average market cap of stocks in the index is $55 billion*.

The S&P Dividend Aristocrats 10% Risk Control Index Stock Market Outperformance

Capital Secure Dividend Aristocrats Bond II

The new Capital Secure Dividend Aristocrats Bond II from Cantor Fitzgerald Ireland Ltd. offers investors the opportunity to participate in the dividend income and growth performance of some of the leading dividend paying U.S. companies whilst, at the same time, protecting the investment from potential capital loss. Dividend stocks can provide investors with a combination of capital gains and regular cash flow. Thus investors in high quality dividend paying stocks have two ways to make a return:

- 1. Capital Gains: The stock price goes up, so shares are worth more than when they were bought.
- 2. Dividends: The company rewards its shareholders with regular dividend payments.

The returns from this bond are linked to the performance of the S&P Dividend Aristocrats 10% Risk Controlled Index (SPXD10EE Index). The performance of this index is based on the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) which unlike many other indices includes the dividend income of the companies, while also providing capital appreciation potential. This index only selects companies that have increased their dividends each and every year for at least the last 25 years in a row. As the index currently yields around 2.5% in annual dividends, this is likely to make a substantial contribution to potential returns.

Dividend-paying stocks reward investors with cash payments to hold their shares and can provide a source of steady income. Dividend Stocks can buffer market volatility, provide a potential hedge against inflation, and also offer the potential for capital appreciation. As interest rates and bond yields have fallen over the past decade, many investors are increasingly turning to high quality dividend paying stocks. History has shown that dividends have been a very important component of overall return in a diversified investment portfolio. Remarkably, dividends have accounted for more than 50% of the overall return from stocks since 1930*. Company management usually consider maintaining or increasing the dividend level as a priority, given the negative signal that cutting a dividend would send to the market regarding future growth prospects.

Cantor Fitzgerald Ireland Ltd. expects that dividends will continue to make up a large portion of the stock market's overall return. Many of today's investors are looking for both a stable source of income and the potential for capital appreciation, features that may be offered by a portfolio that includes dividend-paying stocks. However many also want the added security of capital protection, which this innovative new bond provides.

Risk Control and Enhanced Exposure: The Dividend Aristocrats Risk Controlled Index (SPXD10EE Index) uses a volatility control mechanism, a mathematical algorithm designed to control the level of investment exposure to the underlying S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) by establishing a specific volatility target and dynamically adjusting the exposure to the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) based on its observed volatility. If the volatility level rises above 10%, the cash level is increased in order to maintain the 10% target volatility. If the volatility level is below 10%, then the index will employ leverage to maintain the 10% target level of volatility. The Index's maximum level of exposure to the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) is limited to 150%, but investors in this bond can have maximum exposure of up to 210% of the S&P Dividend Aristocrats total return index (SPDAUDT index).

Maximum Exposure to Dividend Aristocrats Index using 10% Risk Control mechanism:

Option A: 50% Participation in Dividend Aristocrats Risk Controlled Index (SPXD10EE Index) which in turn provides up to 150% exposure to Dividend Aristocrats Index
= 75% Maximum potential exposure to Dividend Aristocrats index.

Option B: 140% Participation in Dividend Aristocrats Risk Controlled Index (SPXD10EE Index) which in turn provides up to 150% exposure to Dividend Aristocrats Index
= 210% Maximum potential exposure to Dividend Aristocrats index.

Diversification: Companies included in the S&P 500 Dividend Aristocrats index come from a broad spectrum of industries. Unlike indices that focus only on high dividend yields, which are typically from the Financials and Utilities sectors, the "Dividend Aristocrats" are well diversified across all sectors and many industries. This removes the risk of your portfolio being tied to just a narrow slice of the market. The index portfolio has both capital growth and dividend income characteristics, as opposed to portfolios that are pure yield or pure capital appreciation oriented.

Not only are the index constituents current members of the S&P 500, they have also been paying increasing dividends year after year for at least 25 years. Given these stringent criteria, the number of "Aristocrats" within the S&P 500 has remained relatively stable over the years. Stocks are equally weighted in the index.

The “Dividend Aristocrats” An Index of Blue Chip High Quality Companies:

The average dividend yield of the Dividend Aristocrats portfolio is an attractive 2.5% per annum (as at 31st Dec 2012). Dividends earned are reinvested back into the index, buying more shares, which in turn can produce more income to buy more shares, and so on. Through the power of compounding of dividends, and the added effect of consistent dividend growth, returns for investors can be substantially amplified. The index has a good balance of growth and value stocks, it is trading at an average of 15 times 2014 forecast earnings and has an impressive average dividend growth rate of 11.1%, average dividend cover is 2.6 times and the average return on equity is 19%*.

Why Invest in Dividend Stocks?

Dividends Can Grow: The S&P Dividend Aristocrats Index selects companies that have consistently increased their dividends year on year for at least twenty five years. The S&P 500 US stock market index also has a long history of increasing dividend payments. The chart below illustrates the growth in dividend income for the S&P 500 Index vs. interest income from the Barclays Capital U.S. Aggregate Bond Index since 1979. As shown below, S&P 500's annual dividend income from a $100,000 investment grew from $5,234 to $21,058, versus an actual decline in annual bond income received from the Barclays Bond index over the same period. Stock prices tend to follow dividend growth over time. So dividend growth is not only important for income, but also for capital appreciation. Given the similar increasing dividend payment characteristics mentioned, the S&P 500 is being used in graphs below for illustration purposes.

Dividend Growth Outpaces Bond Income (1979-2010).

Dividends Are A Major Portion of Returns: Over the long term dividends have been a significant contributor to the returns produced by equities. When an investor holds a stock for a reasonable time frame, a growing dividend becomes an increasingly significant value creator when compared to what was originally paid for the shares. The yield on your original investment can multiply as dividends are increased over time. Multiple expansion (an increase in the stock price earnings ratio) tends to be a less significant contributor to long term returns.

Dividend Payout Ratio: The dividend payout ratio is an indication of how much of a company's profits are used to pay dividends, this ratio is currently relatively low by historical standards (under 30% for the S&P 500 index), so many companies appear to have the room to raise their dividends further.

Warning: Past performance is not a reliable guide to future performance.

Warning: The value of your investment may go down as well as up. You may get back less than you invest.

Financial Strength: The regular payment of a dividend can impose a discipline on a company which may lead to a level of conservatism in the management of a company's financials. As a result, companies which pay dividends typically may be relatively stable, financially strong and well managed businesses. The payment of a dividend can be a signal of a company's financial strength and confidence in its future growth prospects. Therefore it is not surprising that history has shown that companies that continually raise their dividend not only have outperformed the broader market index, but have done so with less risk (volatility) as measured by standard deviation*.

An Inflation Hedge: Investing in stocks that increase their dividend regularly has historically proven to be a good hedge against inflation, especially compared to investments which offer a fixed income stream over the life of the investment. In an inflationary environment, holders of fixed income securities or fixed rate term deposits can face sharp losses in the value of their purchasing power because the interest payments are not growing enough in a period where prices are escalating. However, if a stock's dividend is growing at a rate equal to or faster than inflation, the loss of purchasing power can be prevented. Over time the income received from dividend payments has protected the value of investments from inflation. The chart below shows how the dividend growth of the S&P 500 index has outpaced that of inflation over the long term.

Dividend Growth Historically Outpaces Inflation.

Lower Volatility: The constituents of the Dividend Aristocrats indices have a broad-based appeal in bull or bear markets. In a bull market, these stocks tend to rise in tandem with the broader averages. And when the market slumps, investors are inclined to sell other stocks and hang on to their dividend-paying stocks as buy-and-hold investments. That means they're less subject to the wild price swings that other stocks have generated in recent years. Dividend-paying stocks have historically provided some stability and downside protection in volatile market environments. Dividend-paying stocks typically have a historical record of generating strong earnings and cash flow, which gives them the ability to pay a dividend. Investors desire their stability and income streams while seeking to manage risk in a declining market. The reinvestment of dividends during stock market declines has also been shown to lessen the time necessary to recoup portfolio losses.

Returns: Importantly, the return on the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT index) includes the dividend income from the companies that make up the Index. In this investment climate a sustainable dividend income matters more than ever and is likely to be a significant contributor to investment returns. As mentioned previously, dividends have historically represented a large portion of investors' returns and dividends provided a source of positive return even as equity prices declined in this decade. Dividend-paying stocks have attractive investment and income qualities, and with increasing numbers of the baby boom generation (generation born between 1946-1960) shifting into retirement this could increase demand for dividend-paying stocks in future years.

The Impact of Reinvesting Dividends: Over the long term, the return from dividends has been a significant contributor to the overall returns produced by equity securities. In their book, *Triumph of the Optimists: 101 Years of Global Investment Returns Elroy Dimson, Paul Marsh, and Mike Staunton examined the respective contributions to returns provided by capital gains and dividends over the last century from the year 1900 to 2000. They discovered that long-term returns were largely driven by reinvested dividends. In the chart below, they showed the cumulative contribution to return of both capital gains and dividends, in the U.S. and the U.K. Over 101 years, they found that a market-oriented portfolio, which included reinvested dividends, would have generated nearly 85 times the wealth generated by the same portfolio relying solely on capital gains.

The impact of reinvested dividends on cumulative US and UK equity returns 1900-2000 (Log Scale).

Earnings Quality: The ability to pay cash dividends can be a positive factor in assessing the underlying health of a company and the quality of its earnings. This is particularly pertinent in light of the complexity of corporate accounting and numerous recent examples of “earnings management”, including occasionally fraudulent earnings manipulation. While no investment is without risk, companies that are committed to paying dividends typically may have better business models, stronger balance sheets and a higher degree of confidence in their secular growth capabilities. While there is no guarantee that dividend-paying companies will continue to pay dividends, all of those characteristics historically have helped these companies’ stocks to outperform in difficult and volatile times.

How Does the Risk Control Work?

Risk Control: The Capital Secure Dividend Aristocrats Bond II manages risk by reducing its exposure to the underlying Dividend Aristocrats Index in times of high volatility, and increasing exposure in times of low volatility. This risk control mechanism can have the effect of protecting investors from volatile downward markets by reducing losses. However, it could also potentially cause some underperformance vs. the Dividend Aristocrats portfolio in rapidly rising markets. We have modelled the historic risk controlled exposure to the Dividend Aristocrats in the chart below using the 10% volatility risk control overlay. The risk control mechanism successfully reduced equity exposure substantially during the volatility of the stock market correction of 2008/2009 and it continues to reduce exposure in periods of volatility. Exposure is then increased as markets become less volatile.

In recent times exposure to the Dividend Aristocrats has increased as volatility has fallen back toward 10% (average 11.8% during Quarter 1 2013). If volatility continues to fall exposure could reach the maximum level of 150%. We have found the risk control mechanism works well, reducing exposure in volatile markets and making for better risk adjusted investment returns.

S&P Dividend Aristocrats 10% Risk Control (SPXD10EE Index) Historic Exposure & Performance Since May 2005

Data Source: S&P, Index performance & Historic Risk Controlled Exposure to the Dividend Aristocrats from 2 May 2005 – 30th April 2013.

How the exposure is calculated: The actual volatility level of the underlying S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT Index) is compared to the 10% target volatility every trading day. The Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT Index) average volatility during quarter 1 2013 was 11.8% and average exposure to the dividend aristocrats was 84% during quarter 1 2013. If the actual volatility increases beyond 10% exposure to the S&P Dividend Aristocrats Total Return Index (SPDAUDT Index) will be temporarily reduced to keep volatility at a maximum level of 10%, when volatility falls, exposure to the index will subsequently be increased but with a maximum exposure of 150% of the index. The risk control mechanism uses this formula to calculate exposure:

Leverage = Min (150%, Target Volatility / Realised Volatility-d)

- For example when the volatility is 15% then the exposure to the index will be 66.6%.
- For example when the volatility is 6.7% then the exposure to the index will be 149.25%.
- For example when the volatility is 5% then the exposure to the index will be 150.0% (150% Maximum).

Note: The Capital Protection options also apply at the Maturity Dates and these further reduce risk.
